including those search terms as part of the search keywords that are purchased from the one or more partner sites; automatically generating formatted search result data corresponding to at least one keyword that is to be purchased; sending the formatted search result data for said at least one keyword to at least one of the one or more search partners; including the formatted search result data are in search results produced by said at least one of the one or more search partners in response to searches corresponding to said at least one keyword; initiating purchase of the search keywords from one or more search partners; receiving billing and keyword clickthrough data from the one or more search partners; and

Reasons for Allowance

2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

The best US prior art Cheung et al (2002/0169760) teaches identifying target objects and generating search keywords. But, the best US prior art lacks the limitations of a margin per click (MPC) value, initiating purchase of the search keywords, and performing a search for the target objects located in an electronic catalog separate from the electronic storefront Web site. The limitations lacking in the prior art, in combination with the other limitations clearly claimed in the application, are novel and unobvious.

The best NPL (How Smart Are "Smart Banners"?) teaches about searching, keywords, and clickthrough. But, the best NPL lacks the limitations of a margin per click (MPC) value, initiating purchase of the search keywords, and performing a search for the target objects located in an electronic catalog separate from the electronic storefront Web site. The limitations lacking in the prior art, in combination with the other limitations clearly claimed in the application, are novel and unobvious.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
